First JOECSA online only publication

Welcome to the first JOECSA edition that is available only on the online version. Previously, JOECSA journals were published both in print and online versions. With changing times and with internet being more accessible in the region, it makes sense to start publishing online only journals. Online publications come with certain benefits. They are easy to publish and also cheaper considering the cost of printing. In addition, they can be distributed easily via email or the link can be shared online for interested parties. On the other hand, there are some disadvantages of publishing online only. Hard copy journals are easily stored in libraries for easy browsing. Some people still prefer reading from hard copies as opposed to soft copies. Hard copies are also easily distributed in conferences and symposia as take home literature.

Most journals have adopted a hybrid system. This is the use of both online and print media. This can be done in all editions or some editions can be online and others both print and online. JOECSA will now adopt the hybrid system with some editions online and others both online and print. Most conference editions will be both online and print where as the other editions will be online only. This will make JOECSA leverage on the benefits of both online and print media while keeping the cost of producing the journals low.

Dr EM Nyenze
MBChB, MMed (Ophth), FEACO
Editor in Chief